Update From Molly

We've had a flying start at Gig Buddies Glasgow! We're still in the very early days of the project, in fact we haven't even had our official launch yet, but we're already going strong.

Since I started my role in September, we've been featured in Glasgow Live, had our first social (thanks to Last Night From Glasgow for inviting us along to a great gig!), trained our first batch of volunteers, and started some great relationships with local venues.

We've been amazed at the response that we've had in Glasgow. We've had exciting meetings with SWG3, the SEC, Broadcast, the Glad Café CIC, Mugstock Festival, Last Night From Glasgow, and Independent Venue Week. We're looking forward to making even more great connections in 2020.

The next big thing I'm looking forward to is our Launch Gig, which will feature Sensatronic and other artists still to be confirmed, at the Glad Café on 31st January. So mark your calendars!

I can't wait to see what 2020 will bring!

Saturday 29th February - Beethoven by the RSNO

Our Friends at the RSNO have generously offered us 15 free tickets to the second instalment of their Beethoven Revolution series.

The concert will begin with a talk from conductor Roger Norrington at 6:45pm, and the concert will begin at 7:30pm. The show will begin with two Claude Debussy piano pieces performed by Jean-Efflam Bavouzet, followed by the RSNO's performance of the Eroica symphony.

If you've never experienced a live performance of classical music before, this is a great opportunity to hear an exceptionally high quality performance and see if you like it!

Saturday 29th February
