What is Gig Buddies

Gig Buddies is a project that enables people with additional support needs to get out to more events they love. We do this by pairing members to like minded volunteers who share the same interests. This could be music, theatre, cinema, sport, it's whatever your 'gig' is!

Gig Buddies is all about having more people in your life who aren't paid to be there. Once you've got a Gig Buddy, you'll get out roughly once a month with them to enjoy your shared passion together. We encourage our buddies to develop their relationship in whatever way they feel comfortable with.

'Let's get together and feel alright.'

We also love getting out as a group and discovering new things. This could be anything from an unknown band in a grassroots indie venue, to a national orchestra at the worlds biggest arts festival. What ever it is, we love it live! We run two group social events every month in each area we work in. We try our best to make these a wide variety of events so that we're always introducing our members to new experiences. We've have a lot of partner venues and organisations that enable us to offer great oportunities to our members. You can read more about them later on in this guide.

EVER HAPPENED IN SCOTLAND'

Where Do We Work

This is a guide to Gig Buddies projects run by the Thera Trust. We currently work in Edinburgh, West Lothian, and Glasgow. If you're not in one of these areas, there might be a Gig Buddies project local to you run through another organisation. Go to www.gigbuddies.org.uk for the full list of Gig Buddies projects.

Our Arts Partners

We love offering our members new and exciting experiences. We work with a wide range of venues and arts organisations to be able to get our members and volunteers out to some of the biggest and best events in the country. Here's a list of some our current partners.

A GIG BUDDIES HISTORY LESSON

Gig Buddies was started in 2013 by Brighton based charity 'Stay Up Late'. The charity itself was founded by punk band Heavy Load. Gig Buddies has since been franchised out to other organisations all over the UK and even in Sydney, Australia. Here in Scotland, we are run by Thera Trust.

BEING A GIG BUDDY

Simply put, being a Gig Buddy means being a friend. You're there to enable someone to enjoy an interest that you both share, but you might also be someone they can comfortably chat with if they need to.

Volunteering with Gig Buddies should be relaxed, casual, and feel natural. We want our buddies to be comfortable with each other and encourage them to coordinate their relationship in whatever way suits them. This could be anything from texting, email, talking over the phone, meeting for coffee to arrange events, or even sorting everything out through family or a member of support.

You are not a support worker. This is very important to us in clearly defining your role. You have the right to say 'no' to something you don't want to do or don't feel comfortable with. It's important that people (including your buddy, their support, and Gig Buddies) know your personal boundaries.

While Gig Buddies is a great way to discover new events, don't feel that you can't say no if you know you won't enjoy something. Being friends with someone is also about being able to compromise where you have differences.

What We Expect from you

Being part of Gig Buddies is relaxed and causal, but there are still a few things we expect from our volunteers.

Get out with your buddy regularly.

We ask for you to see your buddy once a month. If you want to meet up more than that, go ahead! If you want to meet up less, make that known and let us know the reasons why. Gig Buddies is about building a regular relationship and we want both parties to be comfortable.

Let your buddy know if plans are going to change.

This seems obvious, but trust us, it's happened in the past. If you aren't going to be able to make it to a planned outing with your buddy, let them know as soon as possible. Not turning up to meet your buddy could do serious harm to your relationship and to their view on what a friendship is.

We want Gig Buddies to be cool. This isn't cool.

Come to socials.

A large part of your role is encouraging your buddy to expand their social networks. We run many regular events that everyone is welcome to attend. We ask for you to bring your buddy to at least 4 of these events across the year. That way, they can meet more people, make more friends, and when you need to stop volunteering with us, they may have such a strong social network that they no longer need a buddy.

Let us know what you're getting up to.

We love hearing what our buddies are getting up to. When you're out with your buddy, take a selfie and share it with us on social media. This also helps spread the word!

GETTING TO EVENTS.

We want you and your buddy to go to whatever events you choose. As long as you can get there, you can go! Here are a few tips for when it comes to booking tickets and getting out and about with your buddy.

Find out how to easily travel around.

Travelling around is a topic that we will cover when you first meet your buddy. It's likely that your buddy will have a 'National Entitlement Card'. This entitles them to free bus travel across the whole of Scotland, and very often comes with a 'plus one'. Make use of this! Being able to travel for free on almost every bus means you can get further afield easily.

How far can you travel for FREE!

Getting free tickets.

Although you can claim £120 per year on exenses, always keep an eye out for cheaper tickets. Many venues including theatres, cinemas, historic sites, and increasingly more and more music venues, will offer free or discounted tickets to people in a supporting role. Annoyingly this isn't always advertised on their website, so it's best to call the box office directly to find out more information.

Just ask 'I'm looking to supporting someone with a disability to this event and would like to know if you offer personal assistant tickets'. They should understand what you mean by this and let you know the venues accessibility information. Free tickets come under many names including 'Personal Assistant (or PA) Tickets', 'Free Tickets For Carers', and 'Supporter Tickets'. They should all mean the same thing. Sometimes you will get a free ticket, sometimes venues will give you both tickets at a discounted price. If a venue doesn't offer free or discounted tickets, please let us know and we will be in touch with them as to why they should.

CLAIM YOUR EXPENSES

Claiming expenses with Gig Buddies is simple. We use an easy to complete Excel document that you can get from your local coordinator. If you don't have a copy, just ask. You can expect your expense claim to appear in your bank account roughly 2 weeks after it gets approved.

All of our volunteers can claim expenses from times they've been out with their buddy. You're entitled to £120 across 12 months. This is your own budget to control. Feel free to claim back the cost of event tickets, public transport, food, etc. However YOU MUST KEEP YOUR RECEIPTS. Without receipts, we can't approve your expense claim.

“But Gig Buddies is a charity and I don't want to take their money”

Claiming your expenses doesn't take money away from anywhere else in the project. When we apply for funding we make part of the budget available specifically for volunteer expenses. If we don't spend this money, we might not be awarded the same amount next time. So, please feel free to make a claim for any money you'd like back.

KEEPING YOUR BUDDY SAFE

Knowing what to do and who to contact in any given situation is vital to keeping your buddy safe. You will have their emergency contact details, this might be their mum, dad, other family member, or even a member of their support team. You will also have the number of your local Gig Buddies Coordinator. Here's some information if calling the contacts you have isn't suitable.
